PRESS RELEASE

Enyo Law bolsters its advice for clients with Solomonik litigation analytics

LONDON - 20 June 2019 - Specialist disputes firm Enyo Law has selected Solomonik's case analysis database to bring a further and more precise data dimension to its litigation practice.

The Solomonik platform allows litigators to track how similar cases have been decided, identify data points which might impact their clients' case prospects or tactics, and utilise examples of how relevant judges have previously dealt with particular fact patterns or arguments.

Senior Partner, Simon Twigden said, "Litigation is inherently uncertain. Solomonik's data and analysis mean we can bring a whole new layer of insight to our advice that can be of material benefit to our clients in determining if, when, and how to litigate."

Gideon Cohen, Solomonik co-founder commented, "We are delighted that Enyo Law has chosen to work with us. They have a formidable reputation and we believe the addition of our data and analytics will have a material benefit for the expertise they provide and the outcomes they deliver for their clients."

About Solomonik:

Solomonik is a litigation research and analytics start-up dedicated to bringing a data-led approach to litigation decision-making. Solomonik was founded by Gideon and David Cohen, who have extensive and relevant legal experience, and Dr Henry Stott of Decision Technology, an analytics and behavioural sciences professional services business.
